Dear President Qiu:

On behalf of the University of California, I convey my heartfelt congratulations to Tsinghua University on the occasion of your 110th anniversary.

As people across the planet face challenging times, there is strength and hope in the missions of the world's universities. I am gratified by the collaboration of faculty from both of our universities, across vast distances and diverse disciplines, and I look forward to seeing our communities undertake new opportunities to work together to tackle the most pressing issues of our time. Universities are meant to serve the greater good of the societies to which we belong. By creating new knowledge and forging new partnerships, our faculty and students continue to light a path to a better, healthier, and more equitable future for all.

At the University of California, we are honored to be your partner and collaborator, and we extend our warmest congratulations as you observe 110 years of Tsinghua's great history. We look with optimism to the future – toward further partnership in scholarship and research.

Sincerely,

Michael V. Drake, MD
