Dear President Qiu Yong,

I am honored by your invitation to attend Tsinghua University's 110th anniversary celebration in April 2021. Unfortunately, it is unlikely that pandemic conditions and related travel restrictions will permit me to join you in person for the anniversary events and the Global Forum of University Presidents. I will, however, be delighted to record a video greeting, which I will send to you shortly.

Yale is proud of its long and productive relationship with Tsinghua. As you know, the ties between our two universities are strong: four of the first five presidents of Tsinghua University studied at Yale. Today, more than sixty Tsinghua graduates study in Yale's graduate and professional schools. Our ongoing collaborations, including our dual-degree programs, reflect our shared commitment to academic excellence. This year, we sustained our partnership through virtual exchanges.

Over the past 110 years, Tsinghua University has grown to become a leading center of learning and research in China. I am confident that the future will bring even greater achievements for your students, faculty, and alumni.

Please accept my warmest congratulations to you and your colleagues on this wonderful occasion. I wish you every success in Tsinghua University's anniversary year.

Sincerely,

Peter Salovey
President
Chris Argyris Professor of Psychology
